A few months ago, Miguel Ángel traveled with his backpack on his back to Oaxaca, while he tried the mexcal and the region's typical dishes, and he assures us that he wound up falling in love with the people and landscapes of Mexico, where he is currently based to film the TV series Infames. In the series he plays a Spanish agent who will try to uncover a money-laundering network.

"When they proposed to me the idea of coming to work in Mexico, I didn't think twice, I have always liked to expand my horizons and, above all, to do quality projects. There are few projects like those from Argos and Cadenatres where they do not only place importance on the love story in the melodrama, but they also communicate something else."

HE DISCOVERED HIS CALLING

For us he is a new face, but the actor is leading a successful career in Spain.

He remembers when at the beginning his tender child's face got him invited to do a casting call for a commercial.

"When I was eight years old I was playing with the junior league of the Real Madrid soccer team, because my other passion is soccer, and a friend asked me if I felt like doing a casting call. And since I liked to act up and was out-going, I got the part, and that is how everything started, but it wasn't until I was 15 years old that I said 'I really like this a lot' and it became my calling."

Miguel Ángel considers himself a dedicated actor, who by chance discovered that he also sung and this brought him to share the stage with international stars.

"As a singer I had the chance to sing with Janet Jackson in Europe or with Nelly Furtado or with Simple plan; it is a crazy moment. There are things that took me by surprise in my career, but to be honest I consider myself more of an actor than a singer."

HE LIKES BEING UGLY

The mysterious and intelligent personality revealed by his character José María Barajas in the TV series Infames, which is broadcast at 9PM on Cadenatres, has been captivating the hearts of the female audience in Mexico. In spite of this, the actor assures us that his career is not based on his appearance.

"I wanted to focus more on acting than on my appearance. If you play a pretty boy, you receive very similar characters, but I have found it interesting to go in other directions. I like to get into character, I grow a beard and long hair, the last character that I did in Spain, I wore false teeth. I really like to change, because in the end if you are only concerned with being good-looking you don't get anywhere," he concluded. "There are not many projects like those from Argos and Cadenatres, where they do not only place importance on the love story in the melodrama, but rather they also communicate something else."
